1-3-1 essay

Introduction paragraph

The first paragraph is an introduction. It contains a sentence or two to get the readers' attention and ends with a thesis statement. The thesis statement contains the main idea of the essay. The rest of the essay supports the thesis statement.

Example: Jacques Cousteau is to be admired because of his inventiveness, his contributions to marine science, and his dedication to this field.

Body paragraphs

The next three (or more) paragraphs are the body paragraphs. Each body paragraph discusses one of the points raised in the thesis.

Each body paragraph begins with a topic sentence

The rest of each body paragraph provides details and examples to support the topic sentence.

In this example, the first body paragraph would discuss his inventiveness, the next body paragraph would discuss his contributions to marine science, and the third body paragraph would discuss his dedication to this field.

Body paragraph 1: Of these admirable characteristics, Cousteau's inventiveness has assisted him most in his desire to explore the new world of inner space.

Body paragraph 2: Cousteau is to be admired not only for his inventiveness, but also for his many contributions to marine science.

Body paragraph 3: Cousteau's inventiveness and his contributions to marine science are matched by his dedication to the field.

Conclusion Paragraph

The final paragraph of the essay concludes the essay. In this paragraph, the thesis in your introductory paragraph is restated (not repeated).
